Youth Ushering in the Kingdom of God

Aren't there annunciations of one sort or another in most lives?" One of my favorite poems, "Annunciation" by Denise Levertov, poses this question. In the middle of her reflection on the Annunciation to Mary, Levertov points out Mary is not the only one invited to say "yes" to God. All of us experience moments when God opens a path for us. We just need to find the courage to say "yes."

Advent readings call us to reflect not just on Christ's coming at Christmas, but on the second coming as well. We reflect on the Kingdom of God—a place where, the Prophet Isaiah tells us, the desert will bloom, the blind will see, the mute will sing. This is an interesting theological topic because we believe we are living in the "already/not yet" of the Kingdom. In other words, the Kingdom of God has already been brought to Earth by Jesus, but it is not yet fully realized. We are already living in the Kingdom of God, but we are not yet living in its fullness.

That brings us back to the poem. Mary did her part to bring the Kingdom of God into the world by saying "yes" at the Annunciation to God's invitation to bear Jesus. How can we help to usher in the fullness of the Kingdom? What are ways we can say "yes" to God's daily invitations to be more Christ-like, and move from the "not yet" to the "fully realized"?

Working with young people, I am continually astonished by their prodigious wisdom surrounding these questions. I stand in wonder as I witness them bringing Christ, and being Christ, to those around them. For example, last month I had the privilege of accompanying a group of high schoolers to Washington, D.C., to attend the Ignatian Family Teach-In for Justice. Over 2,000 young people attended this social justice conference, learning how to transform the world into a place where the Kingdom can flourish. Part of the conference was meeting with a Congressperson and advocating on behalf of those whose voices are silenced. Watching the youth of our parish, and the 2,000 other youth at the conference, engage in such a remarkable and transforming event on the same weekend that Disney+ started streaming left me awestruck and overjoyed!

The youth in IREP [Interparish Religious Education Program] bring God to me, to their classmates, and to the world every day in smaller, but equally significant ways. They lovingly welcome classmates who are tearful and apprehensive about entering a new classroom. They bring mountains of donations for our Thanksgiving and Christmas drives in order to help less fortunate families have an opportunity to celebrate the holidays. They set up beds in the Wallace Hall Women's Shelter to provide our guests a hospitable place to sleep. I have heard them proclaim the readings at our IREP Masses so beautifully that I know they must have spent hours with the Word of God at home practicing.

My vision of God is often so clouded by responsibilities that I fail to accept or even see the small invitations in front of me to say "yes" to God in the way these young people do. The youth of our parish constantly build up the Kingdom here on Earth through their words and deeds. They are not the Church of the future. They are the Church of today.

This Advent, as we begin our new Church year, I encourage all to be open to receiving the annunciations in life that may be slipping past unnoticed or that we are willingly turning away from. Try saying yes! Let's bring the Kingdom of God to earth! We can look to the youth of our parish as an example!
